OUR LONDON CABLE

Effect of the President's Death on London Markets.

Action of Independent Sections of the Stock Exchange—Fear Lest Wall Street Should Require Gold—Credit Abroad Will Not Bear Disturbance.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES
Copyright, 1901.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—When Friday brought the news of the alarming change in President McKinley's condition, a violent spasm of fear passed over our Stock Exchange and affected the money market. The latter was already nervous, and became increasedly cautious, and on the Stock Exchange prices fell heavily.

It was recognized before the day ended that the President could not live, and, amid all the turmoil, sympathy was universally expressed, not for him only, but for his family and for the Republic. In such circumstances it was a painful surprise, when Saturday came, to find that no provision had been made for a prompt official recognition by the Stock Exchange of the calamity of the President's death.

The market opened as usual, but the desire was universal to do no business. Unfortunately, the House Committee, which governs everything, could not be constituted, a quorum of members not being present. Not to be balked, the first American railroad section, then the consol, and with it all the others, passed informal resolutions to suspend dealing as a mark of respect for the deceased statesman. The consequence was that the house was emptied and offices shut up, and yet the officials were obliged to remain, and the official list will be published just as if it had been open and as busy as usual. Indignation is expressed about this anomalous situation in no measured terms, and yet one feels that through the spontaneity of the members' action, in some ways there has been more valuable testimony to real feeling than had everything been done according to rule.

What the effect of the President's lamentable death will be upon our markets generally cannot as yet be estimated. Several times on Thursday demoralization threatened to become perilous, and our money market is nervous to a high degree lest exigencies of finance in Wall Street should compel you to make drafts upon our stock of bullion. We cannot spare any, and no European market can give you gold save Paris, and Paris is now so powerful that it need not part with the metal unless it pleases.

Large amounts of French banking capital are still employed here, and Germany also remains considerably in debt to France. If, therefore, New York calls for gold, nothing need prevent French bankers from diverting the demand on us. These bankers being prudent and far-seeing, probably no such step would be taken. Some millions of the metal could be spared by the Bank of France without inconvenience. Your bankers, if necessary, might even borrow £5,000,000 or more temporarily from it without disturbing credit anywhere in Europe.

The one thing I must impress upon you is that credit on this side will not bear disturbance, not even in France. The tension is still extreme in Germany, and bankers intimately connected with German business keep assuring me that this year will not see any loosening of it in that empire. Russia is again urgently in need of cash to preserve the convertibility of her notes and to revivify her overstimulated and now half-paralyzed industries, and London stands to be shot at from all quarters.

Our Bank is fairly strong, measured by immediate domestic necessities, for our trade continues to shrink and the finance business, usually beginning to be active toward this time of the year, is conspicuously non-existent. Sundry colonial loans are in course of issue, otherwise there is nothing doing. The sale of these loans, however, blocks the way to shipments of colonial gold home, and we can only keep a brave front to the world, provided no call is made upon our stock.

Current credits are shockingly easy with us, merely through business stagnation and the continued excessive Government expenditure; but loans at 1 per cent. and discount at 2½ per cent. do not really signify a strong market. These low rates are produced by a conjunction of opposite influence: accumulations of credit on the one hand, produced by Government borrowings, and stagnation of business on the other. The result is not a healthy ease, but an ease covering no small degree of apprehension. A. J. W.

THE MANCHESTER MARKET.

MANCHESTER, Sept. 15. — Business in this market has been overshadowed for a week by the news regarding Mr. McKinley. The feeling of gloom has been widespread from the day of the attack, rendering ordinary transactions nearly impossible.

Throughout last week the cloth market was characterized by a lack of animation, and by complaints of the general difficulty attaching to business. There was some inquiry for India, but recently many offers have been impossible, although some have been booked. The opinion is general, however, that the present is not a favorable time for operating, especially as stocks on the other side are large.

There were occasional unimportant transactions with China during the week, and there was more demand for South America and the smaller Eastern outlets. But the home trade was apparently lifeless.

Yarns were generally unsatisfactory, although there was a slight increase in buying.

GERMAN MONEY AND TRADE.

BERLIN, Sept. 15.—The announcement of the death of Mr. McKinley did not exercise any depressing influence upon the German Boerses, it being believed that Mr. Roosevelt would pursue the same policy as his predecessor, and also that the efforts of New York financiers to prevent a crash would succeed. Canadian Pacific and Northern Pacific shares fell off somewhat Friday, but both partly recovered yesterday.

The Boerse, however, suffered independently of the death of Mr. McKinley from a variety of untoward events. The week began with the announcement that the Allgemeine Kleinbahn Gesellschaft would lose half its capital through recent financial troubles. Later came the announcement that the Mecklenburg-Strelitz Hypotheken Bank would lose half its capital owing to the difficulties of last Spring. Next came the statement that the report of the investigating committee regarding the affairs of the Pomeranian Hypotheken Bank would be much more unfavorable than had been expected.

Friday brought news of embezzlements amounting to more than 4,000,000 marks by the manager of the Breslau United Shipping Company, involving a number of Berlin and Hamburg banks in losses. This was followed by news of his suicide.

Yesterday brought a run upon the Heilbronn Gewerbebank, causing suspension. The same day witnessed also a reduction by the rolled wire syndicate of 10 marks per ton in the price of wire, and a reduction by the wire nail syndicate of 5 marks per metric hundredweight.

In addition to the foregoing depressing circumstances, numerous annual reports were published showing very disapointing results. Moreover, the reports from industrial centres continued gloomy. A number of first-class firms at Remscheid, the great hardware centre, are in difficulties. Some factories there have reduced wages 10 per cent., and many workmen have been discharged.

The coal situation grows worse. The coal syndicate is carrying on a sharp struggle with British coal in northern ports, and is reducing prices there 15 per cent. It was announced during the week that the syndicate would meet soon to consider a general reduction.

These conditions made the week one of the worst of the Summer season. Quotations of industrials fell generally, some heavily. Ocean transportation shares continued to weaken upon declining freight rates.

Domestic loans weakened, upon the expectation of an advance in the Reichsbank rate of discount. The papers expect an advance soon, arguing that conditions in New York will help largely to bring it about.

The announcement that German banks will take the Russian railway loan of 80,000,000 marks has made an excellent impression on the Boerse, as showing confidence in the financial situation, but it could not impart any strength to quotations. It is believed the loan will be oversubscribed heavily, owing to the present preference for interest-bearing securities over shares.
